FOREWORD

In 1938 the Indiana Daughters of the American Revolution published the "Roster of Soldiers and Patriots of the American Revolution Buried in Indiana", edited by Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne.

Since that time, I have been collecting names of Revolutionary soldiers who died, or were buried, in Indiana and whose names were not listed in the above book. This compilation is in no way intended as a supplement to the "Roster", which was sponsored by the State D.A.R. and entries in which are considered authentic proof for membership in the D.A.R.

The sole purpose of this compilation is to provide for descendants some helpful hints for their genealogical research. I do not guarantee the service of any soldier in my list, the burial place, nor the genealogical data. I have no doubt but that many of the data can be verified. Aside from the pension research mentioned below, I have made no effort to check the information given in the references. I do guarantee the accuracy of the references indicated and the pension abstracts which I have personally copied. All of my material has been gathered from public records open to anyone.

There are 300 names in this list. This summer, through the courtesy of Mr. Leavitt and the help of Mrs. Orrison, both of the National Archives in Washington, D.C., 984 pension files for these names were made available to me. For some names on my list, there were no files; for others, there were several for men of the same name. I think there were 27 John Williamses! For men whose given name I did not have, all the files for that surname were pulled for me to check. In abstracting the service records, I have given only one pair of officers (to provide a clue as to the locality in the state) as the service records are often very long. Full data can be obtained from the National Archives.

The main source of the names was the Veterans' Graves Registration --- an Indiana American Legion project which attempted to list the burial place of every veteran in Indiana from the Revolutionary War through World War I up to deaths in 1940. Of the 92 counties in Indiana, they completed 48. In my list of 300 names, 108 were taken from this source. The Legion information was obtained from field trips, soldiers' burial claims, sextons' lists, cemetery record books, county rosters, undertakers' records, flags, flag holders, government markers, stones inscribed "A Soldier", descendants, old residents, and present owners of farm cemeteries. They made plats for each cemetery; and where this had not been done before (as in the case of private burying grounds), they made an arbitrary plat.

The records are typed on thousands of 3 x 5 cards and are preserved in 90 file drawers in the Archives Division of the Indiana State Library along with the cemetery plats. Where the war was not given on the card, I did not include anyone born after 1765. Many cards bear the notation that government markers or flags were on the graves; but since no dates were given and no war was filled in, I did not copy these names --- some of whom were probably Revolutionary War soldiers.

Another source was a series of articles called "Builders of the Nation", written about Delaware Co., Ind., Revolutionary soldiers by A.L. Kerwood in the "Muncie Star" for about two months from May to July 1910. Some of these clippings (in the Genealogy Division of the Indiana State Library) have the date at the end; on others it has been cut off.

Other sources which I have used are the 50 volumes of the National Society, D.A.R., yearly reports to the Senate; county histories; and manuscripts and typescripts on file in the State Library, Genealogy Division. Personal friends have furnished several names, about six of which were received after my pension research in Washington this summer.

Of the 300 names, there is some uncertainty as to whether about 20 of them died in Indiana; but I have included them to provide a clue to further research.

Abbreviations (other than b., d., m., chn., etc.) are:

My gratitude for their assistance is expressed to Mr. Leavitt and Mrs. Orrison of the National Archives; Janye Pruitt, Fairfax, Va.; Margaret Pearson (Archives Division), Margarete Butz (Genealogy Division), Hazel Hopper and Edna Whetsell (Indiana Division), Caroline Dunn (Pioneer Society), and Dorothy Riker (Historical Society), all of the Indiana State Library; Thelma Murphy, Wallace Weatherholt, and Lewis Jones, all of Indianapolis; and to Katherine Wakefield Gilliatt, Franklin, Ind.

However, an affid. from a man in Richmond, Ray Co., Mo., says sold. d. in Edgar Co., Ill., within 5 mi. of Paris, Ill. It is possible that he has confused the sold. & the wid., as pens. file says sold. was pd. in Ind. up to time of death, and grave location seems positive. He might, however, have d. in Edgar Co., Ill., just over the State Line & been bur. in Vigo Co., Ind. In contradiction, the sold. is said to have d. in Edgar Co., Ill., & bur. in Ogden Cem. This man is said to have been from Mass. & served in Mass., Capt. Samuel Payson, Col. John Graton; later Col. Joseph Read. This disagrees completely with the service record below, which I found in the pens. file. I think that there were likely two men of the same name. MRW.). Enl.
